I teach a wide range of classes that explore both the how and the why of kink. From foundational skills to deeper relationship dynamics, my goal is to help kinksters feel more confident, empowered, and informed—no matter where they are in their journey.

Here's a look at the kinds of topics I cover:

- BDSM Basics and Safety
- Power Exchange and Kink Dynamics
- Practical Skills and Scene Techniques
- Navigating the Kink Community

My teaching style is warm, conversational, and rooted in real-life experience. I don't lecture at people—I talk with them. I encourage students to share their stories, ask questions, and learn from one another, because community knowledge is powerful. I use humor, honesty, and plenty of personal stories to make concepts feel real and relatable.

Consent is always front and center in my classes. I don't tolerate kink shaming, and everyone—regardless of role, gender, or experience level—is treated with respect. If you show up with an open mind and a desire to grow, there's space for you here.

My hope is that you leave feeling seen, supported, and ready to take the next step in your kink journey—with more confidence than you came in with.

Your Scene Went Wrong, Now What?

In this class, "Your Scene Went Wrong, Now What?", we'll dive into what happens when a BDSM scene doesn't go as planned. Even with careful preparation and clear communication, things can go off track. This class will help you understand how to navigate those unexpected moments, whether it's a small hiccup or a major issue. We'll cover why scenes can go wrong, how to recognize when something isn't right, and what you can do to manage the situation in real-time. By the end of the class, you'll feel more confident in your ability to handle challenges and ensure that both you and your partner can move forward positively.

Nurturing Understanding in Caregiver/Little Relationships

In this class, we'll take a closer look at the caregiver-little dynamic within the BDSM lifestyle. This relationship, often misunderstood by those outside the community, is based on trust, care, and mutual support. We'll explore the unique bond between caregivers and littles, offering insights into how these relationships work, the roles each person plays, and the ways in which they can thrive. By diving deep into the nuances of this dynamic, we aim to build a greater understanding and appreciation for the special connection that caregivers and littles share.

Empowered Bottoming: Becoming a Confident and Skilled Scene Partner

Are you eager to become a more confident and skilled bottom in BDSM scenes? While there are many classes focused on improving a Top's skills, being a skilled bottom is just as important for a successful scene. By enhancing your bottoming abilities, you gain self-respect and contribute greatly to the dynamics and satisfaction of a scene.

This interactive workshop is open to individuals of all experience levels and identities, offering a supportive space for bottoms to explore, learn, and grow. Whether you're new to bottoming or looking to refine your skills, this class will help you master the role, boost your confidence, and improve your scene partnerships. Participants will engage in open discussions and collaborative learning.

Navigating Your Reputation in BDSM for Success and Respect

In the kink community, relationships and connections are deeply intertwined, similar to a small, close-knit village where everyone is connected. In this unique environment, news and opinions about individuals can spread quickly. This means that your actions, behaviors, and interactions can significantly influence how you are perceived by others. Since everyone tends to know each other or share mutual acquaintances, maintaining a positive reputation becomes crucial. This class will help you understand the dynamics of reputation within the kink community, how it can impact your experiences, and why it's important to manage it thoughtfully.

Kink is Not a Competition

In the kink community, you might encounter a common trend: some people act as though certain kinks, relationships, scenes, or implements are more valuable or impressive than others. This mindset can create a sense of hierarchy and lead to unhealthy comparisons that detract from the joy of your unique journey.

This class dives into the dangers of this competitive mindset and offers actionable advice to help you focus on your own path, embrace your distinct preferences, and avoid unnecessary comparisons. We'll explore relationships, scenes, implements, and more to provide a holistic perspective on navigating and celebrating your kink journey.

Bratting Beyond Make Me: Navigating Misconceptions and Embracing the Brat

In BDSM, "bratting" is often misunderstood and may be seen as simply being rebellious or defiant. However, bratting is a legitimate kink that, like all kinks, should be approached with clear communication and consent. This class will explore how bratting is more than just pushing boundaries—it's a specific dynamic that can add depth and playfulness to BDSM scenes. We'll focus on treating bratting with the same respect and care as any other kink, emphasizing the importance of open communication and mutual consent. Learn how to embrace and incorporate brat behavior into your scenes safely and responsibly.

Embracing Kink Safely: Crafting Your Personal Risk Profile in RACK

Engaging in kink involves various risks that can impact your social, physical, and mental well-being. Just like participating in adventurous activities such as bungee jumping or skydiving, kink has its own set of inherent dangers. These risks don't necessarily make kink a negative pursuit, but it's important to be aware of them. This class will help you understand these risks and show you how to manage them effectively. By acknowledging and addressing these risks, you can enjoy your kink experiences while maintaining your safety and well-being.

Consent is No Joke

In this workshop, we focus on the fundamental role of consent in BDSM. Consent is the cornerstone of any safe and enjoyable BDSM practice. Without it, what should be a consensual and respectful experience can quickly turn into something harmful and abusive. This workshop will help you understand why consent is so crucial, how to communicate effectively about it, and how to ensure that all parties involved are fully on board with what's happening. By mastering consent, you'll enhance your BDSM experiences, making them safer and more fulfilling for everyone involved.

Distance Dynamics: Nurturing Healthy D/s Relationships in the Digital Era

In today's interconnected world, it's becoming more common for people to develop deep connections with partners who are located far away. Dominants and submissives often meet and build relationships through online platforms. Sometimes, these relationships remain entirely virtual, with partners never having met in person. Navigating a D/s relationship over long distances presents unique challenges, from maintaining emotional intimacy to managing the practical aspects of communication. This class will help you address these challenges, providing you with the strategies and tools needed to keep your D/s dynamic strong and fulfilling, even when you're separated by many miles.

Mastering Impact Play: Exploring Sensual to Sadistic BDSM Experiences Safely

Impact play is a dynamic and varied part of BDSM that can offer a wide range of experiences, from gentle and sensual to intense and sadistic. It's popular because it can be tailored to fit different preferences, whether you're looking for something light and playful or something more intense and challenging. However, because impact play covers such a broad spectrum, it's essential to understand both the pleasures it can provide and the potential risks involved. In this class, you'll learn how to safely explore and enjoy impact play, no matter where you fall on the spectrum, by focusing on key techniques, safety measures, and the right tools for the job.

Starting Out in Kink: Navigating Your First Munch

When people are new to the kink scene and looking for advice on how to start, they're often told to attend a "munch." Munches are casual social gatherings for people interested in kink, but they can be overwhelming if you're not sure what to expect. This introductory class will help you understand what a munch is all about and how to make the most of your first experience.

Dungeons Demystified: Navigating Etiquette, Attire, and Atmosphere in BDSM Spaces

Exploring a BDSM dungeon for the first time can be exciting yet a bit overwhelming. This class is designed to help you feel comfortable and confident by explaining what to expect and how to behave in these unique spaces. Whether you're going to a public dungeon or a private play party, this session will give you the tools you need to navigate these environments with ease.

By the end of this class, you'll have a clear understanding of dungeon etiquette, how to dress appropriately, and how to conduct yourself with confidence and respect. Join us to gain the knowledge you need to become a knowledgeable and respectful participant in the BDSM community.

Saying No is Still Service

In many D/s relationships, submissives are taught—explicitly or not—that obedience is the highest form of devotion. But the truth is, submission rooted in consent, choice, and communication is far more powerful than automatic compliance.

This class will help you challenge the guilt and fear that often come with saying no. You'll learn how boundaries enhance—not undermine—your dynamic, and how saying no can actually deepen intimacy, build trust, and protect your long-term capacity to serve.

This class is about honoring your identity as a submissive and your wholeness as a person. Because when you serve from a place of truth, your submission becomes not just obedient but intentional, ethical, and deeply fulfilling.

You can be a devoted submissive and say no. In fact, sometimes... that's the most loving thing you can do.
